WALNUT HILLS NURSERY.

CINCINNATI, OHIO.

THE attempt to make a Nurseryman's Catalogue answer the place of such works as the "American Orchardist," or "Downing's Fruit and Fruit Trees of America," is believed to be useless, and worse. In this Catalogue, only some of the more prominent characteristics are noted, as something of a guide, where the works above mentioned are not easily to be had.

This Nursery is making additions yearly, to its stock of desirable Fruit and Ornamental Trees, Shrubs, Roses, Plants, etc. None are propagated but such as are received from the most reliable sources, or have been properly tested here. In the course of a very short time, many of the Eastern and Foreign varieties will be in bearing here, and can be decided upon with reference to our soil and climate.

Fall planting cannot be too strongly recommended. In such a season as the last, the drought (not unusual,) continuing for six weeks in the Spring, numbers of newly planted trees have died. Great disappointment is the consequence; and in many cases dissatisfaction with the Nurserymen. It may be supposed that the death of one tree insures the sale of another, while the fact is, that its successful growth and bearing, commends itself to so many persons, that the Nurseryman who understands his interest, will take great pains in the removal, packing, etc., so as to insure its living.

This Nursery is situated about three miles from the City, on the Madisonville Road; persons from abroad, and all interested, are invited to visit it. There will be constantly for sale Green-house Plants and Cut Flowers. The collection of Roses and Camellias is daily receiving additions, and will be much increased this fall.

All orders, addressed to me personally at the Nursery, or through the Cincinnati Post Office, will receive prompt attention. Trees, etc., delivered in the City free of expense. Reference may be had to S. C. PARKHURST, SPRINGER & WHITEMAN, etc.

CHARLES W. ELLIOTT.

The APPLE will thrive in almost any soil, and under great neglect; but to insure a good and profitable orchard or crop, the ground should be ploughed deeply—the trees be well selected, well planted, pruned, and cultivated. In most parts of the country, the very best piece of land on the whole farm is chosen for this, when rolling land will answer every purpose. A Northern exposure, too, rather than a Southern, is now preferred in this neighborhood, and farther South. It somewhat retards the early blooming, and is so far a protection against frost.

The bark upon the body of the Cherry tree sometimes cracks, and spoils the tree. This is believed to be caused by the sap stimulated into action during the day on the Southern side, being suddenly frozen during the night. Plant trees, therefore, with a slight inclination to the South, so that the sun's rays will strike more obliquely upon the stem.

A PEACH ORCHARD should be cultivated,—if with the plough,—not so deeply as to wound the roots. If the disease called the Yellows appears, cut down the afflicted trees and remove them. The Peach Worm MUST be kept out of the roots. All dead branches should be carefully cut out, and long straggling ends be shortened in, in the Spring. Additions will be constantly made to this list, and many now mentioned will be discarded so soon as they are well proven. A short list is in all respects better than a long one. Better two trees of a good variety, than one of a good one and one of a poor one,—a truism certainly!

If the fruit of the PLUM could be protected from the Curculio, no tree would be more desirable. At present, it is only planted sparingly, near the house, or in a piece of pavement, where the punctured fruit is likely to be destroyed, or swept away. It is confidently believed, that if the trees are planted in an enclosure, where hogs are kept, that in the space of two or three years they would be freed from the insect; particularly when standing at some distance from others. A man near Wheeling, who has been successful, told me that he spreads on the ground, as far as the branches extend, three or four inches deep of leached ashes, and treads it down hard. I shall try it.
